These are the photographs of 6 of the 2121 lighters that make up my collection.

All lighters without exception, were found and collected when I met the sea (every summer of these last 20 years) during my walks through the coves of the north of the island of Menorca

The erosion of the sun, salt, sea water, sand, rocks, wind, has transformed the lighters into tiny sculptures. The patina of time has given them new and interesting shapes, textures and colors.

Carles Roig (1961)

Self-taught photographer, he has been working professionally in photography since 1986, a task he has combined with cultural management, teaching and artistic creation.

Always trying to respond intuitively and with the same creative spirit to both commercial assignments and the development of educational projects and his most personal projects. Trying to offer genuine and different answers to the same demands as always.

It moves comfortably through complexity, where the boundaries between different disciplines or genres are blurred.
